Kenneth Medchelke is a gambler, a womanizer, and a thief - or so he'd like people to believe. The fact is that his entire public persona is such a false show that his crew and colleagues in the Wyld's Jokers regiment of Bannson's Raiders have taken to calling him "Ego Boy" behind his back. Whether or not this young vehicle commander, with his lanky frame, thick glasses, and incredibly foul personal odor, realizes the rest of his team is actually laughing at him and not with him, is a matter of some debate.

What is not questioned, however, is his skill at the helm, and more particularly under the hood of the Sniper Artillery vehicle he commands. He is known to have had technical training in his background as a mercenary, but this rather informal experience cannot fully account for the level of proficiency he demonstrates in the maintenance bay. It is believed that the increased speed, weapon range, improved rate of fire, and enhanced stealth capabilities that his vehicle currently demonstrates are the result of his own tinkering. Our analysts believe that either he has managed to produce substantially more power from the vehicle's existing fusion reactor, or he has somehow obtained and integrated a Clan power system that offers lighter-weight construction and greater efficiency to achieve this level of performance. Kenneth, however, keeps the methods behind his technical wizardry a closely guarded secret.

Commentary

Based on the Star League-era Marksman (not to be confused with the M1 Marksman in use today), the Sniper Artillery Vehicle brings mobility and durability to the Sniper-class medium artillery weapon. Produced initially by House Davion's Federated Suns, this massive tank features a single Sniper artillery piece, backed up by a pair each of extended-range small lasers and machine guns.

Kenneth's Sniper vehicle, identified by serial number FSS122/A61-B and nicknamed "Desperado," hails from one of the Suns' later production runs, which rolled off the lines after the formation of The Republic. Medchelke and his crew apparently brought it with them when they joined Wyld's Jokers last year.
