dealings with The Republic of the Sphere—could fill a case file. Only Men's superb skills as a MechWarrior—and the fact that he is the protégé of House Kamata's senior sifu (mentor)—have spared him more serious, potentially lethal, disciplinary action. Only time will tell just how far the legendary good karma of his Warrior House will protect such an impetuous warrior.

Tolin Men considers himself something of an individualist, a dangerously defiant attitude to assume when one is part of the fanatically loyal Warrior Houses of the Capellan Confederation. Though raised under the rigid code of conduct of House Kamata, one of the most ardently loyal of House Liao's Warrior House Orders, Men has been reprimanded several times for "questionable" remarks. The number of recorded instances when he has vocally criticized the policies of the current Chancellor, Daoshen Liao—particularly over the Confederation's recent

The Shen Yi is a newer 'Mech design, developed by the Capellan Confederation shortly after the Jihad as a heavy-fire support unit that emphasized stealth as its main defense. At 65 tons, with good mobility, twin heavy missile launchers, and a thick hide of sensor-baffling armor, this 'Mech gradually replaced several older missile support elements throughout the CCAF. The ultraloyal Capellan Warrior Houses were among the first to receive the majority of these new machines, which remain a prominent part of these elite combat orders today.

Tolin Men won the right to pilot serial number CC0133-22A (now nicknamed "Iron Tiger") after fighting a "gentleman's duel" with a fellow House Kamata warrior over his political views. To his credit, Men did not cripple or kill his rival, Shu Muren, in the brief, bloody swordfight, but the incident added one more black mark against him in the eyes of his superiors.
